Scandinavia's premier junior tournament at The Royal Tennis Club

Now starts the main draw for 22 Swedes

This week 96 players from 27 countries will compete for the Kungens Kanna and Drottningens Pris. Some of the world's best juniors are attending the tournament. After the qualifying finals today a total of 22 Swedes have moved into the main draw. Overall some outstanding tennis at the Royal Tennis Club.

Swedes Carl Gustafsson and Edis Nokic got through to the main tournament by winning their qualifying matches today, as did Lancelot Carnello who played a solid match against Polish competitor Witold Konopko on court 1.

In the main draw awaits Europe's number one Timofey Skatov from Russia and Maja Chwalinska from Poland who both won the European Team Championships this weekend.

On the boys side we will get the chance among others to see a future talent Ross Weibull from IS Gota, who has been outstanding in 2014 and national team players Tim Tordendahl and Victor Arsov.

Sweden's Junior Girls Team, Caijsa Hennemann, Victoria Carlsten and Frida Furst, who were in the European Championships playoffs last week are hoping to do well this coming week and have all qualified for Drottningens Pris main draw. Keep an eye out for Mary Petrovich as best performing swede in last week's Tennis Europe event in Lidingö.
